

Rainey

Rainey joined our family in the beginning of July 2016. I had always wanted a Dalmatian since I can remember so after doing a lot of research on the breed and reading what people had to say about them, we thought a Dalmatian would be a good fit for our pack. We are big believers in rescue dogs, as we also foster and place dogs for a local organization where we live. We knew we did not want to get a dog from a breeder, but rather adopt a dog who was in need of a home. Since we live in Canada, there are not a whole lot of Dalmatians around, so we began to look into other rescue organizations in the States. Dalmatian Rescue of Colorado was the only organization to get back to us, and we were so happy to hear from them. Once we saw pictures of Rainey, we knew she was the one! We arranged everything with the rescue and set a date to drive down to get her. After only getting lost once on the way in North Dakota, sleeping for a night in Rapid City, stopping at Black Hills National Forest, and 16 hours of driving later, we finally picked up the newest member of our family. We did not want to waste time getting home so we drove as far as we could till it was dark, stayed the night and were on our way home the next morning. Once we got home, Rainey settled in quite nicely and quickly with our pack. She is a great addition to our family and we can't imagine life without her. She has been on many adventures already (boating, going to the lake, ball games, sitting around the fire) and there will be many many more to come. Everyone says she is such a pretty dog and loves her to pieces. People always ask why we have so many dogs and why would we get another? I always say: We have the room, time, and love for them, so why not? When they are brought up right, a pack of dogs is not that much work. They teach and train each other, which is why Rainey is so chill at our place and took no time to adjust.

Rainey at the beach.

Rainey with her brothers and sisters.

Boat ride!

Sitting by the fire with brother Sisco.

First time at the lake and she loved the water!